Dear Friends:

FREE

As the Walters ended its fiscal year on June 30, 2008, we could look back with pride on nearly two years of free admission. Indeed, the initial successes of “going free” were sustained and even enhanced. Our attendance was holding steady at more than 50 percent above “pre-free” levels, African-American participation remained up by a factor of three, and we were continuing to welcome nearly four times as many children. It was increasingly clear that we had transformed ourselves into a family destination, and at the same time, that we were coming ever closer to reflecting the demographic richness of our region, and realizing the mandate of our founder, Henry Walters, to act “for the benefit of the public.” We owe an enormous debt of gratitude to the City of Baltimore and Baltimore County for three years of supplemental funding that enabled us to take this dramatic step.

MASTER PLANNING

In October 2007, we began to develop our first Master Plan in more than a decade. Our efforts were guided by Polshek Partnership Architects of New York, a firm that has worked in that capacity with the Brooklyn Museum since the 1980s and, most recently, has won awards for the master planning and renovation of Louis Kahn’s Yale University Art Gallery. The museum’s last Master Plan, developed in the mid-1990s, resulted in the renovation and reinstallation of our Centre Street Building. Like that earlier effort, this new plan included a thorough analysis of all Walters properties, from our original beaux-arts “Palazzo” at the corner of North Charles and Centre Streets, which opened in 1909, to the Home Mutual Insurance Building at 100 West Centre Street, which was acquired for the museum in late 2005 through the generosity of one of our trustees.

The purpose of the Master Plan is to help us form a comprehensive view of our building assets and understand better how to use them in fulfillment of our mission to “bring art and people together for enjoyment, discovery, and learning.” It also helps identify present and future facilities needs, and guides us in developing potential expansion plans over the next generation.

In 2001, when our newly renovated Centre Street Building reopened, it was already clear that some facilities expansion would eventually be necessary. The Walters’ temporary exhibition space is among the smallest and most constrained of fine arts museums nationwide. Moreover, since we eliminated our admission fees, our Family Arts Center has been taxed well beyond its capacity. There are wonderful potential gallery spaces at ground level in our original palazzo, which are now dedicated to our photography studio and to overcrowded art storage. And since the Hackerman House opened in 1991, we have seen significant growth in our Asian collections, including major gifts from the Alexander Griswold and Doris Duke estates, and from John and Berthe Ford. These additions, coupled with potential additional gifting of major Asian works and the possibility that the Austen-Stokes Foundation loan collection of art of the Ancient Americas may eventually become a permanent part of the Walters, make it imperative that we explore all of our space utilization options and all potential expansion scenarios.
Our view for the future of the “Walters Campus” was and is informed by an awareness that significant enhancement to the endowment that supports our operational budget must precede any physical expansion. Indeed, the current economic downturn makes this all the more critical to the museum’s future.

ART, TECHNOLOGY, AND SCIENCE
The Walters’ website, which was completely transformed and upgraded in 2006 as part of a strategic technology initiative spearheaded by board member Roger Novak, was further enhanced during our 2008 fiscal year. Major additions included interactive education modules for teachers that utilize our collections across the students’ curriculum toward meeting Maryland State education standards.

Thanks to a generous grant from Marilyn and George Pedersen, the Walters was able to explore intensively during 2007–2008 the intersection of art and science in the service of our public mission. We brought in leading social scientists to guide us toward more sophisticated levels of goal-setting and outcome measurement for our exhibitions and major programs. Central to this initiative for self-evaluation was an intensive exploration of how we might enhance creativity, thoughtful risk-taking, and cross-disciplinary collaboration across the museum.

Another, quite different, facet of our exploration of the intersection of art and science was realized through a two-day “convening” in November 2007, that included, along with a core group of Walters staff, leading curators, conservators, art historians, social scientists, aestheticians, and neuroscientists from this country and abroad. Our aim was to explore new ways of thinking about how we might better utilize our collections and our research capabilities to enhance and enrich our visitors’ experience. Among the more exotic areas of conversation was neuroaesthetics: the study of the brain and how it experiences beauty. This innovative convening was the crucible for the creation of several collaborative projects with Johns Hopkins University neuroscientists that will be realized in the coming months.

MAJOR EXHIBITIONS

Gee’s Bend: The Architecture of the Quilt
As a young art historian, four decades ago, I could not understand how Renaissance Florence, with a population of just 200,000, could have produced, simultaneously, Leonardo and Michelangelo. In the summer of 2007, I had similar feelings, though this time about the tiny village of Gee’s Bend, Alabama, and about its quilters, who brought us our most popular summer exhibition in memory. Our visitors’ enthusiasm was unbounded, and, to judge from the scores of testimonials recorded our comment book at the end of the show, they were profoundly moved.

So the puzzle remains: how could such a small, remote location produce such extraordinary talent? After ten weeks of living with these wonderful creations, we all came fully to endorse the effusive review of the show’s first incarnation, at the Whitney in New York, in 2002, of Michael Kimmelman, senior art critic for The New York Times, who characterized these quilts as “some of the most miraculous works of modern art that America has produced.”

Déjà Vu: Revealing Repetition in French Masterpieces
This ambitious and innovative exhibition, conceived by curator Eik Kahng, brought together multiple versions of the same French masterpieces of the nineteenth century, in the exploration of what “originality” means and of the various reasons why an artist would return again (and again) to the same compositions. Praised by art critic Blake Gopnik of The Washington Post as among the best regional shows of 2007, Déjà Vu also broke new ground for the Walters through its creative use of technology, from our first cell-phone tour to an interactive computer station where visitors could curate their own exhibition of Monet’s Grain Stacks in various museum settings. Among the most memorable juxtapositions of Déjà Vu was that comprising the three versions of Oedipus and the Sphinx by Jean-Auguste-Dominique Ingres. One from the Louvre, was dated 1808, when the artist was in his 20s; another from the National Gallery, London, was made around 1826; the third from the Walters was dated 1864, when the artist was in his 80s. A young artist had become old, but his “touch” remained undiminished!

Maps: Finding Our Place in the World
The Field Museum, in partnership with the renowned Newberry Library organized the largest and most comprehensive exhibition of maps in half a century, and the Walters was fortunate to have been its second and final venue. This was especially meaningful for us, since the last great maps show had been presented in Baltimore by the Walters in 1952. Organized by Dorothy Miner, the Walters’ revered first curator of manuscripts, that exhibition was titled The World Encompassed, and to this day it remains a landmark exhibition and publication.

A single, anonymous benefactor stepped forward and in one sweeping gesture, made it possible for us to mount this extraordinary exhibition, which was the catalyst and centerpiece for Baltimore’s city-wide “Festival of Maps,” involving well over thirty other organizations.

The crowds that filled our galleries during the run of Maps found many surprising treasures to enjoy, from Charles Lindberg’s annotated trans-Atlantic flight chart, to William Smith’s geological map of England—the “Map That Changed the World”—to a powerful four-minute video of the Civil War, which tallied the war’s enormous number of fatalities as it revealed only minor changes in the battle lines.

For the many successes of 2007–2008, we are indebted to our board, donors, volunteers, and staff.

Thanks to you all!

Gary Viken, Director
Gee’s Bend: The Architecture of the Quilt
June 15–August 26, 2007
Organized by the Museum of Fine Arts, Houston, and the Tinwood Alliance, Atlanta, the exhibition celebrated quilts made by African American women residing in the isolated community of Gee’s Bend, Alabama. These quilts, whose patterns—often based on architectural elements—have been handed down through generations, exhibit a unique, bold improvisational style reminiscent of minimalist twentieth-century art. Their brilliant design has elevated the quilt to fine art. Forty-five quilts were displayed.

The Walters’ venue of Gee’s Bend: The Architecture of the Quilt was presented by The Women’s Committee of the Walters Art Museum. Additional support was provided by William R. and Wendyce H. Brody, Vernon A. Reid, James H. DeGraffenreidt, Jr., and Mychelle Y. Farmer, M.D., Wendy Myerberg Jachman and Jennifer Myerberg, and the William L. & Victorine Q. Adams Foundation.

Déjà Vu? Revealing Repetition in French Masterpieces
Organized by the Walters in association with the Phoenix Art Museum, Déjà Vu sought to instill a critical awareness of the pervasiveness of repetition in early modern painting and its persistence in contemporary visual experience. It explored the significance and artistic means of repetition in the art of eleven French painters (Jacques-Louis David, Jean-Auguste-Dominique Ingres, Jean-Léon Gérôme, Paul Delaroche, Eugène Delacroix, Jean-François Millet, Camille Corot, Claude Monet, Paul Cézanne, Edgar Degas, and Henri Matisse). The questions the exhibition posed were: Why do painters repeat themselves? What did repetition mean in the Academic tradition; and how do the motivations for repetition change during the modern period? The exhibition explored these questions through thirty-six paintings, twenty pastels, drawings, and prints, eighteen photographs, and three sculptures, ranging in date from roughly 1800 through 1940. There were a number of interactive components.

Déjà Vu? Revealing Repetition in French Masterpieces was supported by an indemnity from the Federal Council on the Arts and the Humanities. The exhibition was presented by The PNC Foundation with lead support from four anonymous donors. Contributing sponsors were Canusa Corporation, Stanley Mazaroff and Nancy Dorman, and Sotheby’s.

Maps: Finding Our Place in the World
March 16–June 8, 2008
Organized by the Field Museum and the Newberry Library, Chicago, Maps was the most ambitious American exhibition devoted to maps in more than fifty years. Visitors to the exhibition came face-to-face with 115 of the world’s greatest cartographic treasures, not only maps made by great cartographers of the Middle Ages and the age of exploration, but also seldom seen and exciting artifacts from around the world that broadened visitors’ knowledge of the almost universal human activity of map-making. The exhibition featured a variety of unique, rare, and often beautiful artifacts, including maps on cuneiform tablets, medieval maps, manuscript maps of explorers, globes, maps of areas all around the earth, and maps of nowhere: utopias and imaginary maps. Highlights included three maps by Leonardo da Vinci, J. R. R. Tolkien's map of Minas Tirith, and Thomas Jefferson's map of the proposed contours of the states of the Union. The exhibition was divided into the themes of Finding Our Way, Mapping the World, Mapping Imaginary Worlds, Mapping Your World, Mapping Nature and Society, Mapping History, and Living with Maps.

Presented by Navteq. Maps: Finding Our Place in the World was supported by an indemnity from the Federal Council on the Arts and the Humanities. The exhibition at the Walters Art Museum was made possible by the extraordinary generosity of an anonymous donor. Additional support was provided by Signal Hill, a Contributing Sponsor, and Mr. and Mrs. John R. Rockwell.

ANCIENT FOCUS EXHIBITIONS

Daily Magic in Ancient Egypt
December 2, 2006–November 25, 2007

Magic was an important part of the religions of the ancient world, and amulets played an important role. Their images and symbols were believed to possess great power. Amulets protected their wearer and could guarantee health, well-being, luck, and even immortality. They were also used in rituals. Some of these objects were available to everyone, while others were restricted to the elite or to special groups of initiated men or women. Daily Magic displayed forty-six Egyptian amulets, scarabs, figurines, and ritual objects.

Salviati and the Antique: Ancient Inspiration for Modern Glassmaking
December 1, 2007–November 2, 2008

Like many other artists, glassmakers of the late nineteenth century were inspired by ancient art, and recent excavations had made the splendor of ancient glass accessible to them. Drawing on various qualities of ancient glass—techniques, motifs, shapes, and colors—Salviati & Co. in Venice produced stunning new creations. By juxtaposing ancient glass with its nineteenth-century counterparts, this exhibition of eighteen objects highlighted the ancient sources for Salviati & Co. and the artisans’ creative response to earlier glassmaking techniques and aesthetics.

NINETEENTH-CENTURY FOCUS EXHIBITION

Portrait Medallions of David d’Angers
December 9, 2006–June 22, 2008

Pierre-Jean David d’Angers (1788–1856) was one of the most influential portrait sculptors in France during the first half of the nineteenth century. Seven of the Walters’ fifty-seven bronze portrait medallions by the artist were on view.

OTHER FOCUS EXHIBITIONS

Byzantine Art from the Dumbarton Oaks Collection
April 27, 2005–November 4, 2007

The Byzantine collection of the Dumbarton Oaks Research Library and Collection, Washington D.C., ranks among the most significant in the world. Ranging from the fourth to the fifteenth century, the collection includes several pieces of Western medieval art and examples of Greek and Roman art. For approximately two and a half years, while the galleries at Dumbarton Oaks were closed, seventeen of these objects—including ivory caskets and devotional panels, a relief statue, and a magnificent icon of St. Peter—were on view in the Walters’ medieval galleries. The temporary installation of Dumbarton Oaks’ objects at the Walters offered a rare opportunity to see these great collections side-by-side.

Ottoman Embroideries and Other Ornament
May 5–September 9, 2007

The Walters has a fine but little-known collection of eighteenth- and nineteenth-century embroidered textiles from Greece, Asia Minor, Armenia, Algeria, and other regions of the former Ottoman Empire. The exhibition, in the Walters Manuscript Gallery, comprised thirteen of these works and twelve other objects that display many of the typical ornamental motifs of Ottoman decorative art. The Ottoman Empire was home to several large ethnic and religious communities. They shared a sophisticated “language” of ornament, which each of them modified and adapted to its needs and values. Many of the works had not been exhibited in the past three decades, and some had never previously been on display.

Linda Day Clark: The Gee’s Bend Photographs
June 13–September 2, 2007

Since 2002, Linda Day Clark has visited Gee’s Bend, Alabama, six times, thoroughly familiarizing herself with its people and the environment. While doing so, she has befriended the town’s quilters, who have achieved national prominence for their community. Combining an intimate knowledge of her subjects with an acute observation of detail, Ms. Day Clark’s photographs convey penetrating insights into the lives of the Gee’s Bend quilters and their unique artistic traditions. In a selection of twenty-five prints, she captured the vibrant colors and bold patterns found in the local architecture as well as the intense hues of the landscape that are reflected in the quilts.

Deja Vu? The Repeating Image in Renaissance and Baroque Art
September 8, 2007–February 17, 2008

This exhibition looked at the theme of artistic copying from a Renaissance and baroque perspective. Focusing on seventeen works of art—nine paintings, five sculptures, and three decorative arts objects—it presented a survey of the kinds of artistic copying that were popular in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. The overarching point was that artists of this period had a range of motivations for copying earlier works and did not always think of copying in the pejorative sense of forgery.
Déjà Vu? Recurrence
September 19, 2007–January 20, 2008

To complement Déjà Vu? Revealing Repetition in French Masterpieces, the curators of the ancient Egyptian, ancient Greek, and Asian collections drew together thirty works that reveal aspects of repetition and reuse in each of those cultures. Visitors were encouraged to explore the ways in which artists from vastly different places and times returned time and again to the same images. They also discovered, through study of the image of a mother and child, how distant cultures, for their own distinct reasons, create images that appear strikingly similar. Equipped with the knowledge gained through these observations, visitors were encouraged to journey into the permanent collection galleries in search of similar repetitions and re-expressions of the themes they had just seen.

Mapping the Cosmos: Images from the Hubble Space Telescope
February 2–July 27, 2008

Coinciding with the exhibition Maps: Finding Our Place in the World, this focus exhibition presented ten images from space taken by the Hubble Space Telescope. Hubble images have been instrumental in mapping unknown parts of the universe and documenting the death and birth of stars millions of light-years away from us. This exhibition was a joint venture with The Johns Hopkins University’s museum program, the students of which served as curators. (Eight additional Hubble images not directly related to this exhibition were installed in the Sculpture Court.)

Maps on Purpose
March 16–June 8, 2008

Art on Purpose, a community-based arts organization that uses art to bring people together around issues and ideas, conducted Maps on Purpose, a project in partnership with the Walters. Working with twenty-three Baltimore neighborhood community organizations, schools, and artists, Art on Purpose used a selection of maps from Maps: Finding Our Place in the World to inspire mapping projects in Baltimore city neighborhoods. These projects addressed specific wants and needs of the neighborhoods, reflecting and projecting their issues and identities. The product of the endeavor was this exhibition, which ran concurrently with the larger exhibition. The installation changed every one or two weeks and focused on three (in one case two) neighborhoods each rotation.

Sonya Clark: Loose Strands, Tight Knots
June 28–September 21, 2008

This exhibition featured nine works of sculpture, beadwork, photography, and three pieces of video art by contemporary artist Sonya Clark with a selection of eleven objects from the Walters’ collection. In their creative process or material composition these works express a relationship with shifting—often highly subjective—notions of beauty. Clark, a contemporary artist whose methods are concerned with the function of objects (and art) in material culture, makes works that engage the organic life of the object as well as her concerns for its heritage and legacy. There was an interactive, educational component.
PORTRAIT MINIATURE EXHIBITION

American Miniatures from the A. J. Fink Collection
June 28–December 14, 2008

In 1963, the A. Jay Fink Foundation, Inc., presented to the Walters Art Museum a collection of over four hundred portrait miniatures. Given in memory of Abraham Jay Fink, the works range in date from the sixteenth through the mid-nineteenth century. Mr. Fink (died 1962) inherited a collection begun in 1930 by an uncle and continued to add to it while attending the major auctions in the field held from the 1930s through the 1950s. This exhibition displayed eleven miniatures painted by American artists.

OFF-SITE EXHIBITIONS

Untamed: The Art of Antoine-Louis Barye
The Philbrook Museum of Art, Tulsa, Oklahoma
June 10–September 2, 2007
The Flagler Museum, Palm Beach, Florida
January 15–April 13, 2008

Untamed, organized by the Walters, showcased the works of Antoine-Louis Barye (1795–1875), the foremost animalier sculptor of the nineteenth century. At the Philbrook Museum of Art, 135 works were displayed, while the Flagler Museum showed 86. Unlike other projects of this nature, the exhibition included not only Barye’s sculptures, but also his oil and watercolor paintings as well as sketches. The works were drawn exclusively from the Walters’ holdings, which are generally regarded as the most extensive in existence.

Early History of the Bible
Phoenix Art Museum, Arizona
December 10, 2007–March 9, 2008

This exhibition showcased a seventeenth-century Torah scroll and looked at Old and New Testament scripture in different religious traditions. Fourteen other objects, including scrolls, manuscripts, and printed books from the Walters’ collection, helped to illustrate how texts were added to the Torah over the centuries to form the Hebrew and Christian Bibles.

Déjà Vu? Revealing Repetition in French Masterpieces
Phoenix Art Museum, Arizona
January 20–May 4, 2008

Déjà Vu?, organized by the Walters, sought to instill a critical awareness of the pervasiveness of repetition in early modern painting and its persistence in contemporary visual experience. It explored the significance and artistic means of repetition in the art of eleven French painters (Jacques-Louis David, Jean-Auguste-Dominique Ingres, Jean-Léon Gérôme, Paul Delaroche, Eugène Delacroix, Jean-François Miller, Camille Corot, Claude Monet, Paul Cézanne, Edgar Degas, and Henri Matisse). Why do painters repeat themselves? What did repetition mean in the Academic tradition; and how do the motivations for repetition change during the modern period? The exhibition explored these questions through fifty-seven works of art ranging in date from roughly 1800 through 1940.
Realms of Faith: Medieval Art from the Walters Art Museum

The Walters Art Museum, New York City, New York
March 5–July 13, 2008

Realms of Faith presented a selection of fifty medieval works from the Walters’ collection, spanning more than a millennium and covering a vast geographic range. Focusing on the function of religious objects and the meanings that they had for their Byzantine and Western medieval users, the two main sections—“The Realm of the Sacraments” and “The Realm of Devotion”—related these objects to what is known about the way medieval people interacted with similar works, whether in public liturgical celebrations or in more personal devotional experiences. A third section, “The Realm of Nature,” explored medieval views of animals and nature symbolism.

Donors

The Walters Art Museum extends its sincerest thanks to everyone—individuals, foundations, and corporations—who contributed so generously in FY 2008. The support and friendship of our family of friends and donors enable the Walters to maintain the highest standards for visitors from all walks of life and corners of the globe. We are especially pleased to recognize those individuals, corporate partners, and foundations who made gifts from July 1, 2007 to June 30, 2008.

SPECIAL PROJECT SUPPORT

FREE ADMISSION
In the fall of 2006, with support of local government, area foundations, and corporations, the Walters eliminated its admission fees to its permanent collection. The museum gratefully acknowledges Baltimore City and Baltimore County for their leadership support as well as the following:

- City of Baltimore
- Baltimore County Government and Baltimore County Commission on Arts and Sciences
- The William G. Baker, Jr. Memorial Fund
- The Joseph and Harvey Meyerhoff Family Charitable Funds
- The PNC Fund / Baltimore Community Foundation

EDUCATION
The Walters gratefully acknowledges the following gifts in support of our educational programs.

These programs are designed to engage audiences from different ages and backgrounds, stimulate creativity and curiosity, and build an appeal that makes the Walters’ historical collection relevant to our lives today.

- Maryland State Department of Education
- The Institute of Museum and Library Services
- The David and Barbara B. Hirschhorn Foundation
- The William G. Baker, Jr. Memorial Fund
- The Helen and Merrill Bank Foundation, Inc.
- The Patrick and Aimee Butler Family Foundation
- The Helen P. Denit Trust
- The Goldsmith Family Foundation
- The J.M. Kaplan Fund
- The Jim and Patty Rouse Charitable Foundation
- Women’s Club of Roland Park
- Miriam Lodge K.S.B., Inc.

WALTERS TECHNOLOGY INITIATIVE
For support of the digitization of the collection, for the greatly enhanced Walters website and for the creation of new on-line interdisciplinary educational resources, we gratefully acknowledge these generous gifts:

- Cynthia and Lee Alderdice
- Anonymous
- Alex. Brown & Sons Charitable Foundation
- Peter and Millicent Bain

ANDREW W. MELLON FOUNDATION

In FY 2008, the Walters received the final payment of $700,000 from the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation, completing the endowment of two mid-level curatorial positions. In addition, the Walters was selected to be among four American museums to receive a challenge grant of $1,750,000 from the Mellon Foundation, which must be matched with new funds of $1,250,000, to endow our program of curatorial fellowships. To ensure continuity while we raise the matching funds, the Foundation included significant spendable funds as well. The Walters Art Museum acknowledges with gratitude the leadership support of the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation and the friendship and advocacy of Program Officer for Museums and Conservation, Angelica Z. Rudenstine.
